

Elena Nemkova: Affective Accidente

by Richard Bright | November 2017 | Comments Off on Elena Nemkova: Affective Accidente

The sculptures of the series "Affective Accidente" are a kind of solidified emotions. The organic and synthetic materials shape in their layers the crusts of power of the human cerebral reactions to the internal or external stimuli. The forms are based to the data provided by 3D fMR brain scanning and some testimonials descriptions.

WHAT IS EMERGING IDEAS?

"I want to put a ding in the universe".
Steve Jobs (co-founder of Apple)

The aim of Emerging Ideas is to showcase the work and ideas of emerging artists, photographers, scientists, and writers who explore the interactions between the Arts, Sciences and Consciousness.

Emerging Ideas is FREE to contribute.

If you wish to contribute, there are a number of options –

- Up to 5 images (Jpeg format) or 1 video (to include embed code) + artist statement (100 words max) + website link
- Article – fiction or non-fiction (500 word max) + contact/web link

Please send your contribution to richard@interaliacentre.org

For further information, contact info@interaliacentre.org

A further option will be that a selection of Emerging Ideas contributions will be regularly drawn upon for full article or interview in the main magazine.

Emerging Ideas is free for all to access, make comments and create a discussion. All we ask is that your comments are constructive and kind.

Emerging Ideas is supported by:
